[From:] WASHINGTON, 29 October 1962

[To:] Foreign Ministry Mexico

144. I confirm telephone conversation of last night. Secretary Rusk convened all ambassadors [accredited] to White House and OAS to outline development of international crisis of recent days. He said message sent Moscow yesterday and immediate response by President Kennedy had fundamentally alleviated tension. He often insisted nevertheless that the crisis had not ended because there may still be several kinds of difficulties that may arise relating to interpretation and implementation of agreements reached, which mentioned in message and letter above. Rusk asked us to tell our governments that elimination of imminent danger through withdrawal of nuclear weapons from Cuba still leaves open Cuban problem and, fortunately, that President Kennedy has not reached nor will he reach any agreement contrary to resolutions approved in Foreign Ministry's consultation meetings at Punta del Este without consulting the Organization's system. Further information and commentary.
